

Debit Card Risks â€“ What You Need to Know

February 18, 2015 â€“ Periodically, we remind our readers that debit cards and credit cards are not the same thing, and that the consumer protections available for each type of card are significantly different from one another. Given the recent increase in the number of data breaches around the world, we thought this might be a very good time to go back over the two products. Fortunately for us, NBC News in Los Angeles just did a very nice video report on this subject. We encourage you to watch the complete report as it provides a good breakdown on the differences between these two types of cards.
